Who's your grocer? Has he a reputation? He should have a reputation, just the same as your doctor has, and your lawyer shouldn't be a "sharp practice" man. A business reputation for fair and square dealing, truthful advertising, advocating pure, quality goods only—money back if not satisfied.

All of the above your grocer should guarantee. Does he?

There are grocers who know nothing about their business; they rent a shop, buy from plausible salesmen connected with some wholesale house; do not know how much it costs them to do business; don't know how to sell; have no system; don't know the class of goods to buy for the trade they cater to; goods get shop-worn on their shelves before they are sold.

Consider that your grocer is an important factor in the daily life and must be depended upon. There are a lot of grocers who cut and slash prices for a time, who sell goods improperly labeled, short weight and inferior quality. There are grocers who buy a lot of goods from wholesalers on promises, sell cheaply, and at the end of six months or a year, clear out of town with a snug sum. Do they care for a reputation? Was it their intention to stay in business year after year? They sold cheap; they got the money; they went into bankruptcy. Do you think they care about the health of their customers and their happiness and well-being, or about the pockets of the poor and foolish wholesalers who trusted them?

The grocer that intends to stay in business should follow the policy of selling good honest goods of reliable quality and full weight. He should know the cost of doing business and add a reasonable profit. In order to make a reasonable profit, he must do a large business; large sales make small profits, enough to satisfy any reasonable thinking man. The grocer's customer does not envy him making a little on everything he sells, providing he satisfies them, gives them the best at a reasonable price and guarantees them their money will be returned if necessary.

Ask yourself—

Who's your grocer? It's a matter of health.

Goldberg, Bowen & Co.'s groceries are honest, are served by competent sales people and prices are fair. You cannot get better groceries elsewhere; you won't usually get as good.

Who is your grocer? It's very important to have the right kind of a grocer. Health depends upon it, and where health is not, there can be no happiness. Some people do not give this question as serious consideration as it requires.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF EATING

Not only what you eat, but how you eat it. There is a vast difference between "good living" and "high living."

Pure food is essential to a sound body. Adulteration in the slightest degree is poisoning the blood and shortening the life. Next to simple pure food is thorough mastication. All food should be chewed with systematic thoroughness. Make an experiment—"bolt" one meal and masticate the next properly—results will show.

After the "bolted" meal you will have to urge the mind in order to get it to work properly; the body will be uneasy for several hours.

On the other hand, a meal eaten with deliberation will enable you to work with comfort and pleasure.

What is the vital part of a ship? The engine room. The engine room is the object of the utmost care. Do they feed the engine with cheap fuel? No; the whole ship depends on how the engine works.

Food is our fuel and the stomach is the furnace we use it in. How long would an engine do its work if fed in the same reckless manner as some people feed their stomachs, in order to maintain physical life?

Who is your grocer? It's a matter of health.

A WORD ON THE ADVANTAGE OF MAIL ORDERS

The competition of trade in the big city guarantees to the purchaser city prices. In sending orders to a house that has a reputation, the customer is assured of the same treatment as if giving the order in person. The city dealer's prices are easily compared with the small country dealer's—the city dealer has his catalogue—one price to all. A comparison of prices is of interest to the purchaser—compare.

The quality of the goods counts. The stock of goods of the small merchant in the country is generally purchased through a wholesaler—no telling how long the wholesale house had it in stock before it found its way to the small dealer. The giant retailer in the large city has an immense trade and goods are not allowed to become shop-worn or stale; frequent sales cause frequent replenishments.

To mention another reason—the one of variety. The small store keeper in the country carries only a limited variety. The large dealer augments his stock in order to cater to the most fastidious customer. The large retailer in the city has unlimited credit, is rated in commercial literature as A—A1, has the confidence of the banks and of all who deal with him; he receives the best prices because the manufacturers and producers know that their money is just as good as if it were in the bank to their credit.

The retailer in the large city has to maintain a reputation; with him honesty must be the best policy; he has too much at stake to do otherwise. The retailer of groceries in a large city has to see that his stock conforms to the National Pure Food Law. The small dealer in the country has not time and the size of his business does not warrant the attention of specialists in each department—this the big dealer in the city can afford to have.

Now to say a few words about the big dealer in the city—ourselves. He who deals with us will obtain only the soundest, the purest, the most reliable goods, full weight and measure and full count, only the genuine article. In addition to the initial cost, we ask the expense of doing business and a fair profit for our services—this latter not exorbitant, but fair.

We do not sell cheap goods—we have but one quality. Cheap goods are not satisfactory to the customer and the dealer—ours are good reliable goods, fairly priced. Our packing is superior and we guarantee satisfaction in everything we sell. Should the least complaint arise, remember that we offer you your money back on everything purchased here—cheerfully.

May we have your next order?

Tracy, Cal., Feb. 7, 1909.

Messrs. Goldberg, Bowen & Co., San Francisco.—Gentlemen: I have your letter of Feb. 5, in which you suggest that I state to you any cause of complaint which I may have, etc.

I believe I will take this occasion to say to you that my dealings with you during the many years you have filled my orders have been most satisfactory in every respect.

Your goods have been received in perfect condition and show the greatest care in packing—needless to say their quality is always first-class and exactly what I order. I have always felt satisfied that I received full value, and I can recall no occasion for complaint.

My orders have not been as large as I would like to make them, but I deal nowhere else, except locally for a few staples—and I will shortly send you the balance of my account and another order.

This is the first opportunity I have taken to assure you of my entire satisfaction in dealing with you. It is your due, however, and therefore a pleasure to do so.

Yours truly,

W. W. Britton.

Port Arthur, Manchuria, Nov. 17, 1908.

Messrs. Goldberg, Bowen & Co., San Francisco.—Dear Sirs: The goods ordered from you reached us a few days ago in first-class condition. We thank you very much for your care in filling, what to you must be a very small order, so faithfully.

An order for payment goes through our Board of Missions whose headquarters are at 156 Fifth avenue, New York, and I hope the money will reach you in good time. Yours very truly,

A. V. Bryan.

P. S.—I enclose three Japanese war notes of the value of 10 sen (5 cents gold) each. Kindly give them to the man who packed my goods.

We emphasize the fact that we never buy, and therefore cannot offer for sale, any article adulterated or bearing a false label. This has been our policy for fifty-eight years, and when we offer you imported liquors, cordials or groceries, they are fully guaranteed as such.

All our goods are guaranteed under the National Pure Food Law. Besides being pure, they are of the highest quality that can be offered, and are sold at reasonable prices.

FIVE O'CLOCK TEA IN JAPAN

Ceremonial to be Mastered Only After Long Study It is an Exhibition of Cultivation, Taste and Grace—There is also an Element of Physical Culture in It—Function Regulated by Ancient Traditions

"I would like to serve tea for you, although it will not be as good as you have in your own home," is a remark that is repeated very often to every Japanese who comes to this country.

Tea making indeed seems to be considered by Americans as if it were a special inborn talent of the Japanese. Every one seems to associate the name of the country with tea and flowers. There are very few who will not be surprised to hear that three or four years are needed in order to master the art of tea making, and there are some who devote all their lives to this art alone.

The art of the matter is not, as many think, that of making delicious tea, but its main purpose is to develop graceful and beautiful manners and to train the body so that its movement is under the perfect control of the will. In this respect the art is physical culture more than anything else.

The beginning of this art is very obscure. According to the popular notion it has existed since the eighth century. In order to entertain the guests and break the monotony of simply serving tea in ancient times they used many curious and quaintly beautiful movements in the process of the tea making.

It was by no means considered an art until 1500 A. D., when, the time curiously corresponding with the Renaissance of European history, Japanese learning and art were recovered and developed, and tea making took the distinct shape of a fine art, with the sister arts of flower arrangement and the incense ceremony through the patient work of a Zen priest. Zen is a denomination of Buddhism.

An entirely new development was established fifty years later by Senno Requin, a priest and an artist, who was first employed by the powerful ruler of that age as the teacher of this art among the nobility. From him came the two distinct schools, "Omote-Senke" and "Ura-Senke," differing from each other in their principle of movement.

Previously the art had been used wholly among the nobility, who under the wing of their ancestors' merit devoted themselves to nothing in the world but leisure and pleasure, and it had become one of the most aristocratic and refined of enjoyments. How much time and energy they spent in studying fine shades of movement and producing beauty of form can never be imagined by an Occidental who lives up to the proverb, "Time is money."

Until the reign of Meiji, when Japan opened her door to the wide world, the tea ceremony was one of the most important features of social life. All those who felt themselves to be people of culture had necessarily to acquire the art. Then the peaceful sleep of ancient Japan was suddenly broken by a great tide of foreign influence pushing upon its coasts, and life became too grave to play with tea and flowers.

Yet the reverence and love of people for this art is by no means lost. Many still derive from it enjoyment and sense of repose and contrast to the busy world outside. In many of the girls' high schools now there is a special course for teaching this ceremony. If one visits the Japanese Woman's College, the only woman's college of the country, he will find an artistic little house surrounded by a flower garden where an expert is teaching the art, so important is it to Japanese education and culture. A brief description of the ceremony is as follows:

Every well-to-do family generally has a special tea house in the garden which is made of wood or more expensively of polished bamboo. It contains two or three rooms besides a kitchen. If they do not have the special house they set aside some rooms for the occasion.

The size of a room in a tea house is regulated by the number of mats used in it, a mat being usually three yards in length, two yards in width and four or five inches thick. The room is planned to accommodate a definite number of the mats, so that they just fit in side by side without leaving any floor space uncovered. The smallest size for a tea room is four and a half mats and the largest about ten mats.

The decoration and the colors of the walls are very carefully studied. Not too much, not too little, the moderate or medium is the principle which the Japanese use. The thing that is entirely disgusting to them is "the cheap and fancy."

Facing toward the garden there will be paper windows which are framed in polished bamboo. Opposite to these there is the "Tokonoma," in which on the wall are hanging one or three pictures—the number differs according to the size of the room and the taste of the mistress. Before them are placed the flowers, very carefully arranged in a fine old flower vase.

In front of the "Tokonoma" there is the fireplace and the seat where the mistress will make tea and serve it. The fireplace is very different from any with which Occidentals are familiar. It is sunken in the floor. In summer a fire bowl is used instead of the fireplace.

The seats of the guests are in a row in front of the windows. The utensils used in the tea ceremony are a fireplace, a kettle, a pitcher, a teacup, a bamboo spoon, a tea caddy, a bowl into which the waste water is thrown, a ladle and a bamboo instrument with which the tea is stirred and diluted.

A special tea is used for this purpose. Usually it has a yellow-green color and is powdered. A silk napkin, red or purple in color, is carried by the mistress and by each guest.

No one can get a true picture of these several articles so long as he imagines them from the tea-making utensils with which he is familiar. For instance, the tea cups he would expect to be thin cups with Japanese women's figures or flowers in all sorts of colors on them, but as a matter of fact the teacups which the Japanese like are little colored.

There is some very valuable china, called "Kutan," which has all colors upon it; however, it is more refined than that which is seen in the Japanese stores of this country. The cup that is used in the tea ceremony is very queer. It is about four inches in diameter and usually made by the hand of an artist. Its color is generally gray or light green, ornamented with the carved figures of flowers and Chinese or Japanese characters.

When a lady wants to have a tea ceremony in her house she sends out the invitations a week before the date on which she has chosen to have it with the names of the guests she has invited to the function. The smallest number of guests for a conventional affair is four and the largest eight. If the number is more than that the furnishing of the room and the process of serving become entirely different.

The time chosen is usually afternoon from 4 to 5 and its season is in winter from January to March and in summer from June to August. The guests come a little earlier than the time set and go to the waiting place.

When the hour is come the sound of a little bell is heard and they proceed to the tea house under beautifully shaped pine branches or perhaps the plum tree in full blossom, which fills the garden with its ethereal odor. The little entrance to the tea house is quietly opened and the guests go in; first the guest of honor, then the others, one after another in the order of their precedence.

They seat themselves before the fireplace where a red fire of charcoal piled in a beautiful pattern is seen through the oval shaped hole and the steam is ascending through the room from the top of the kettle, a trifle opened. They go next before the "Tokonoma," where the taste and skill of the mistress is best expressed in its flower arrangement and their harmony with the pictures which are hanging on the wall. They admire these and comment on the culture and personality of the woman who accomplished these pleasing things.

When they take their seats they find at the place of the guest of honor an artistic little fire bowl in the shape of a cherry flower in which fine incense is burning. She takes it up and smells it and then hands it down to the second, who passes it on down the line. By carefully smelling the incense they guess what perfume is used there. It is nothing but a guessing game done in a courteous and dignified manner.

When it is over the door opposite to the guests' seats is very quietly opened and the mistress, the artist of the ceremony, first appears. She is dressed in a silk crêpe of very quiet and beautiful color, which is carefully adjusted to the delicate figure of its wearer so that it trails on the floor behind her. She has a little silk napkin folded twice cornerwise tucked in front of her sash.

She bows to the guests very courteously, who return her greeting in a similar manner, without any words of greeting. The process of the tea ceremony is begun by her bringing the tea utensils to the fireplace one by one.

First she holds the pitcher up with both hands to the height of her chest, making a circle with her curved arms, and gracefully steps toward the fireplace. She places the pitcher four inches from the right side of the fireplace. In a like manner all the paraphernalia is brought in and set in its proper place.

She takes the napkin out of her sash and wipes all the things very carefully. Then she puts one spoonful of tea in the teacup, and cooling the hot water a little by pouring cold water into the kettle, she dips it into the cup with the ladle and stirs it up with the bamboo instrument spoken of above. She offers this to the guest of honor and then to the second, and so on.

The cake is served before the tea. The tea has been passed to all the guests. Then the hostess cleans the things used and takes them to their original places. After the process is over she comes out and takes a seat with her guests. The silence is then broken.

The guests praise the skill and taste of their hostess and talk about the name of the incense that was offered to them. Thus the animated though very quiet conversation relative to the artistic success of the ceremony is carried on until the time of departure.

No one who does not see the ceremony can appreciate the enjoyment in it, for it is entirely different in idea from receptions, parties or other social occasions common in other countries. The pleasure in the ceremony is neither from the tea, deliciously made though it is, nor the hour of social intercourse, but rather from the grace of movements exhibited in the whole process and the harmony of the colors and furniture in the room, which produces the quiet and restfulness that permeates the atmosphere and spirit of every guest.

It will be well compared with the pleasure which one has while listening to a rivulet running through the rocky valley, watching a sweet daisy standing by the wayside or looking at a beautiful piece of art. It is a purely artistic pleasure which is simple at first, but grows deeper the more it is experienced.—From the N. Y. "Sun."

HAVE YOU EVER TASTED PINEAPPLE?

Travelers returning from the Hawaiian Islands tell us that they never really knew what pineapples were until they visited Hawaii. The half-ripe pineapples at the fruit store, the canned green fruit at the grocers, or even their own preserved pineapple in the pantry bore no resemblance to the luscious fruit of Hawaii. "Hawaiian Pineapple," they say, "is so different."

Hawaiian Pineapples are grown in a sub-tropical climate, in a soil which exactly suits them, and they are not picked until the very day when they are to be eaten or canned.

There is not a trace of the woody fibre which we find in even the finest fruit that has been picked half ripened for shipment. There is the delicious flavor that everyone likes, and with it a texture as tender and delicate as that of a peach.

The fact is the Hawaiian growers have made a specialty of raising a large, tender, rich and delicious fruit, rather than the tough, woody varieties produced in other parts of the tropics for shipment to distant markets.

Canning Hawaiian Pineapple

Fortunately we may now enjoy Hawaiian pineapple at its best, no matter where we live, for within the last few years the industry of canning pineapples has been wonderfully developed. Great plantations of pineapples are cultivated entirely for export in preserved form. The fruit comes to full maturity on the plant, is picked at its best and canned at once.

The canning industry in Hawaii is new, and only the most modern and sanitary methods are used. Hawaiian pineapples are put up in the new sanitary cans, which absolutely prevent contamination of the contents by acid or solder.

No human hand touches the fruit in peeling or packing. Every process is accomplished by safe, modern mechanical methods.

Absolutely nothing is added to the fruit except pure granulated sugar, and within six minutes from the time a pineapple is delivered to the peeling machine it is pared, cored, sliced, packed and the sealed can is submerged in a bath of live steam, which thoroughly sterilizes the entire package.

You cannot help making comparisons when you open a can of Hawaiian pineapple. You compare it with the best home-canned pineapple and find it tenderer, more delicious, more perfectly flavored. You cannot get such results in your own kitchen for you have not such fruit nor such facilities.

Again, compare it with fresh pineapple. The Hawaiian pineapple has still the advantage. It is a better variety than any which can be shipped profitably; it has been ripened to full perfection on the plant; it has no woody fibre. It cuts with a fork or spoon like a canned peach.

Still again, compare Hawaiian pineapple with other canned pineapple, but there is no comparison. The tough, woody, tasteless canned pineapple which we have hitherto known is hardly pineapple at all, as you will admit after your first taste of canned Hawaiian pineapple.

The Three Forms

You can buy Hawaiian pineapple in three forms—sliced, crushed and grated. The sliced pineapple is usually served just as it comes from the can; the crushed and grated are used like apple sauce and also in delicious made desserts and beverages, as described in the following recipes.

Only large perfect pineapples are used. The core is cut out by machinery and thrown away. To fit the can properly, the peeled pineapple is cut by machinery into a perfect cylinder. This makes the sliced pineapple. Large outside pieces of the best part of the fruit are left. These are put up as crushed and grated Hawaiian pineapple.

Plain Sliced Hawaiian Pineapple.—Delicious, served just as it comes from the can. Keep a few cans on the panty shelf, and have a really excellent dessert which can be served at a minute's notice. No other ready-to-serve dessert approaches Hawaiian Pineapple in appearance or flavor. No more expensive than canned peaches, pears or apricots of equal quality.

Hawaiian Pineapple with Cherries.—If a still more ornamental dish is desired, add to a can of Sliced Hawaiian Pineapple one small bottle of Maraschino cherries. This may be served in sherbet glasses if preferred by cutting the pineapple into sections.

Hawaiian Pineapple Salad.—Sliced Hawaiian Pineapple makes an excellent salad course for a ladies' luncheon. Serve it with other fruits or alone, dressed with mayonnaise or French dressing on lettuce leaves. It is excellent when mixed with grapefruit, tart apples or halved Malaga grapes. The syrup should be drained off and reserved for sherbets or pudding sauces.

Pineapple Omelette.—Add a cup of granulated sugar to a can of Crushed or Grated Hawaiian Pineapple and cook gently till the juice is somewhat reduced. Make a five-egg omelette and fold in the hot pineapple while the omelette is still very soft. Dust the top thickly with granulated sugar and brown with a salamander or in the broiler of a gas stove. A quick and delicious luncheon dish.

Pineapple Ice Cream.—To one can of Grated Hawaiian Pineapple add the juice of half a lemon and a small cup of sugar; when thoroughly dissolved add one pint of cream and one quart of milk and freeze.

Pineapple Sherbet.—Make a syrup by boiling together for five minutes two cups of water and one of granulated sugar. Add the juice of one lemon and a can of Grated Hawaiian Pineapple. Freeze slowly, and pack as usual. Sherbets containing fruit pulp or other semi-solid ingredients must be turned slowly to get good results. This quantity makes enough to serve six persons generously.

Pineapple Compote.—Cook rice after the Southern fashion, boiling quickly in a large quantity of hot water, draining in a sieve and drying in the oven or on the back of the range. Make the hot rice into little mounds about the size of a slice of the pineapple, and place a slice of Hawaiian Pineapple on top. Make a sauce by adding butter, sugar and a little boiling water and lemon juice to the pineapple juice. Pour over the rice and pineapple and serve warm. Use either as an entree or a dessert.

Pineapple Shortcake.—Make a rich biscuit crust, very short and slightly sweetened. Bake in a sheet or round fully an inch thick. Split while hot and butter generously, spreading the top thickly with Crushed or Grated Hawaiian Pineapple. Serve with or without cream.

Pineapple Jelly.—Soak a box of gelatine in a cup of cold water until it is soft. Add a lemon sliced thin without removing the rind and two cups of sugar. Dissolve with three large cups of boiling water and strain through cheesecloth or a very fine sieve. Add a can of Crushed or Grated Hawaiian Pineapple. The fruit will be distributed more evenly through the jelly if it is not added until the latter begins to cool, but has not yet set.

Pineapple Layer Cake.—Use any good recipe for layer cake, and bake in three large tins. Put together with the Grated Hawaiian Pineapple, and frost with plain icing, flavoring with a little lemon juice. The pineapple by itself makes a very rich, moist filling, and should not be allowed to stand more than a few hours before serving. If the cake is to be kept longer, some of the plain frosting should be stirred into the pineapple before the cake is put together.

Pineapple Fritters.—Drain the slices from a can of Sliced Hawaiian Pineapple and save the juice for a sauce. Cut each slice into two or four pieces, and dip into a fritter batter made of one cup of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, a pinch of salt, one beaten egg and milk enough to make a mixture that will pour slowly from a spoon. Fry in hot lard or olive oil. Dust with powdered sugar, or serve with a sauce made from the pineapple juice by adding sugar, butter, a little boiling water and a little lemon. These are far superior to pineapple fritters from fresh fruit, as the tenderness of the Hawaiian Pineapple makes them soft enough to be cut easily with a fork.

Pineapple Pie.—Line a ten-inch pie plate with any good pastry crust and fill with a can of Crushed or Grated Hawaiian Pineapple to which has been added a full cup of sugar and a teaspoonful of cornstarch moistened in water. If a larger pie is wanted from one can of fruit, add tart, juicy apples, sliced or chopped.

Pineapple Tarts.—Make good butter pastry, roll out very thin and line twelve small or six large patty tins. Divide the contents of a can of Hawaiian Pineapple, either Grated or Crushed, equally among the tarts, adding a small teaspoonful of sugar if a sweet, rich tart is liked. Bake very quickly and serve fresh.

Pineapple Turnovers.—Make plain pastry, roll thin and cut into four-inch squares. Drain a can of Crushed Hawaiian Pineapple by emptying on a puree sieve and letting the juice drip through, saving for sherbets or sauces. On each square put a large spoonful of pineapple, a small piece of butter and a spoonful of granulated sugar. Fold the squares into triangles, pinching the edges together firmly so that they will not come apart in the hot fat. Fry in deep lard and serve warm, dusted with powdered sugar. These are the "fried pies" of New England which have gained a reputation for being indigestible, largely because they are so good that people eat too many.

Pineapple Puddings.—Almost any of the excellent puddings usually made with apples can be made of Hawaiian Pineapple with very decided gain in flavor as well as in novelty. The dessert which made with apples is ordinary and commonplace may be transformed into an unusual and more elegant dish by simply substituting Hawaiian Pineapple.

Pineapple "Brown Betty."—Fill a baking dish with alternate layers of buttered bread sprinkled with sugar and Grated Hawaiian Pineapple, letting the top layer be of the bread with an extra spreading of butter. Cover with a plate and bake in a slow oven, adding a little water if it seems to dry out. Remove the plate, brown the top and serve with "fairy butter," which is nothing but butter and powdered sugar beaten together until they foam. In cool weather a very little boiling water is necessary to make the fairy butter.

Pineapple Biscuit Pudding.—Butter individual baking cups and drop into each a large spoonful of Grated or Crushed Hawaiian Pineapple. On this place a tablespoonful of soft biscuit crust, leaving plenty of room for the dough to rise in steaming. Cover the cups closely and steam in a kettle of water for about an hour. Turn out on plates and serve with any preferred sauce.

Pineapple Sponge Pudding.—Cover the bottom of a buttered baking dish with a layer of Crushed or Grated Hawaiian Pineapple and pour over it a sponge cake batter made by any recipe which has proved reliable. Bake until the batter leaves a broom straw clean. Serve with or without a sauce. It is good enough without.

Pineapple Confections—Pineapple Bonbons.—Drain the contents of a can of Sliced Hawaiian Pineapple, reserving the juice for sherbets or pudding sauce. Cut the rounds of pineapple into pieces of even size, about one-half an inch at the outer edge. Place on a plate so that they do not touch, and dry in the gentle heat of an open oven. Boil sugar to the "soft ball" stage, and beat to a fondant. Shape the fondant over the pieces of pineapple, decorating the white bonbons with bits of candied cherries, violets or angelique.

Pineapple Glace.—Prepare the pineapple as for the other confections, taking care that the surface of the pieces is quite dry, as this is essential to success. Boil sugar without stirring until it spins a brittle thread, and pour carefully into a cup or bowl which stands in a pan of very hot water. Dip the pieces of pineapple very carefully into the hot candy, and cool on lightly buttered plates. Like all other glaces, this can be made only in crisp, sharp weather, as very moderate heat or moisture will make the surface sticky.

CIGARS

Our customers are fully convinced that the value we give is not equalled elsewhere. To be conservative, 20 per cent more value in the quality and workmanship of all cigars is found here. Those not our customers should avail themselves of this saving, not counting the satisfaction.

THE ORIGIN OF DINNER

The word "dinner" is believed to have sprung from a corruption of dix heures, indicating the time at which, in the old Norman days, this meal was taken. The mere idea of having dinner at the barbarous hour of 10 o'clock in the morning would send a modern chef into a fit; yet it was at this early time that persons of quality in both England and France partook of the meal. Froissart mentions waiting upon the Duke of Lancaster at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, after he had supped; and during the reign of Francis I and Louis XII of France fashionable people dined from half past ten and supped at the latest at 6 in the evening. Again in the Northumberland "Household Book," bearing date 1512, it is noted that the family rose at 6, breakfasted at 7, dined at 10, supper at 4, and shut the gates at 9 p. m.

The olive was brought to California years ago by the Mission Fathers. They loved the tree for its Biblical and historical associations, and also prized it for the beauty of its evergreen foliage, its fruit-meat and its oil.

California ripe olives are known and appreciated by all who have visited California, and are highly valued by Californians on account of their fine flavor and their great food and medicinal properties. By the method of curing the fruit, which has been perfected, the fruit can be kept indefinitely in any climate and can be transported to any part of the world.

Ripe olives are packed in hermetically sealed tins, in which they retain their fine nutty flavor indefinitely, and which insures them against damage in shipment. Ripe olives are brown and black in color and every cell is full of oil, one quart of the olives containing one-third of a pint of oil. You know that you get your olive oil pure when eating the right kind of ripe olives.

Ripe olives have three times the food value of the best lean meat. They are delicious, appetizing and healthful. A menu is not complete without them.

Olive oil was held in high esteem by the ancients, and although it was one of the earliest products of the earth to be used by man as food and medicine, few persons today have ever tasted pure olive oil and fewer yet have tasted pure olive oil that was good. Goldberg, Bowen & Co's "Sierra Madre" brand of Pure Olive Oil is pronounced by connoisseurs to be superior in every respect to any other olive oil produced in the world. By the new and sanitary methods in olive oil production, we are able to have produced for us a light, delicate oil of brilliant color, having an exquisite aroma and flavor.

The use of our pure olive oil in food, to the exclusion of all other fats and oils, will purify one's body, giving health and vitality and extending the term of life many years.

Sierra Madre Olive Oil is prepared for us especially for table and medicinal use.

THE BEST

Our lives are a struggle to obtain the best—the best in everything—position, wealth, health, but without health, what avails position and wealth?

For fifty-eight years we have sold groceries, wines, liquors and cigars and the thousand and one articles that maintain life. We pay a little more than we would for inferior goods, but we do not count that, for we get satisfaction, and you do, too. There is a little difference in the price, but there is a great difference in the security.

The house of Goldberg, Bowen & Co. was doing business when our old men and women were young.

Why?

Grocery goodness is more important than grocery cheapness. No guess work about our groceries—they are from best sources, and for every article in our establishment there is a pure food guaranty from the producer. The quality is right and the prices are right.

You can buy cheaper goods. Lots of cheap goods are before the public.

How did we work up such a big business? There is only one answer—"Quality and Fair Dealing."

Always the same—always good—Everard's Malt Lager Beer.

Sierra Madre Olive Oil is a specialty with us, and a necessity with you.

Digestion is a potent factor in its effect upon the mind, as well as on the body; both depend largely upon proper nourishment.

Olive oil is a valuable aid to digestion; it renders the food palatable and nourishing.

Sierra Madre Oil makes a fine salad, pleasing to the taste and of the greatest benefit to the system. Physicians recommend olive oil for the liver.

We serve the fastidious, cultured people. We have a reputation to maintain and we spare no expense of time, labor, care or money to justify the confidence of the public. We are selling nothing but the best, most reliable and purest foods. We guarantee our goods, or money back.

It appears strange, but it is nevertheless true, that many will give more attention to their horse or automobile than they do to their own bodies. A man will give his horse the best hay and oats, his automobile high test gasoline and the best grade of oils, yet this same man will be careless about what he puts into his own body.

From the acorn comes the oak. Look to the food you give your children.

Sierra Madre Olive Oil—"it's all right in the salad."

It's our business to serve you as well in the country as we would do if you lived right next to one of our stores—same attention, same good goods, and money back if you are not satisfied.

Years ago we said there was no such thing as cheap Java and Mocha coffee. We charged then 40 cents—the price is the same today.

All the fakers that used to sell "Java and Mocha" coffee for 25 cents have discontinued since the pure food law came into effect.

We invite you to our coffee warehouse, to inspect the original mats and bales of Java and Mocha. Ask some other fellow to show you. Real goods cost money; they cannot be sold for less than what they cost, plus the expense of doing business, and a small profit for the dealer.

We do not aim to sell cheap stuff—good goods plus expenses and our profit. We're satisfied with a small profit. There are lots of people willing to pay a fair profit for the genuine article—we do not care about the rest.

Since we must eat to live, let's have the best. Men and women who want their money's worth should purchase Goldberg, Bowen & Co.'s groceries only.

WINE AS A CIVILIZER

Lecture of Dr. Ferrero, the Brilliant Italian Historian at the Lowell Institute, Boston, Mass., November 30, 1908

The following is the press report of Dr. Guglielmo Ferrero's recent lecture in praise of wine, which has created quite a sensation, but more than all it has caused many people to think on the subject of the value and uses of wine among civilized peoples:

"I take for my topic this evening an example of little things," said Dr. Ferrero. "No proconsuls, no emperors, simply the story of wine.

"History in general," said the speaker, "presents only great personages, ministers, wars, revolutions, and treaties. One knows why the State made battle, its strategic plans, its diplomatic agreements, but at the same time one does not know how the people lived during any part of the time. History as it is written does not generally trouble itself about little men or small facts, yet these smaller men and minor facts may be of the greatest consequence." From the small facts one learns of costume, the idea of the family, the place of the landholder, of cultivation of the soil and the like. There are no insignificant events in history, for great happenings are always accompanied by smaller ones which may not seem important, yet which have their influence. We may know little about the condition of the masses, but nevertheless the State and the institution rest upon them no less surely than a building rests on its foundations.

For many centuries the Romans were water drinkers, the favorable location of a bountiful spring, now just rediscovered, having determined the location of the great city itself. Wine was used on important occasions or as a medicine, and women were not expected to drink it. The feeling in Rome was much toward women wine-bibbers as it has been till recently in Europe regarding women who smoke. "Now no more." At the time of the Christian era the women drank only a sweet wine, and many are the anecdotes of punishment under the Roman law that made the family council arbiter of life or death, of the woman who drank, and of her who stole her husband's keys to the wine cellar.

In a vaunting way the Romans for a long time decried the use of fine wines. Cato boasted of having partaken of the same wine as his oarsmen, "but then," said the speaker, "Cato was a queer fellow who pleased himself by ridiculing luxury." It was unworthy of a Roman to admire a choice wine. The Greeks were the wine producers, as are the French today. The finer wines were served at feasts in single portions, even at great dinners. This was the earlier condition.

As Rome spread about the world, the vine was distributed throughout Italy, and the greater the conquest of foreign territory the stronger the home industry of wine producing. There is evidently a relationship between the two facts. As the policy of culture increased luxury spread and with it the use of wine. The old-time aversion was dissipated and city and country learned to drink. Rome not only slaked its thirst, but had veritable fountains of wine. The wars had two results, they carried the soldiers into vine-growing countries, and they brought to Italy the skilled viniculturists of the best regions. Just as there have been recently in California vine-dressers from Piedmont and Sicily, so in those days Ægean farmers found employment in planting in Italy the vine of their home islands.

The vine has made its mark on political institutions, the monarchical form being a result that would not have happened if the country had not been covered with grapes and olives. It had its influence upon the establishment of peace and order. With the vine growing on its hills and plains, Italy was anxious for peace. A short time before Christ the invading army of Hannibal moved within its borders, and a couple of centuries later the rebellion of Spartacus stirred the people. The former was the most serious occurrence, yet the people called out no less loudly for protection against the latter. In the time of Hannibal, Italy had its fields covered with grain and its cattle; when Spartacus revolted, it was a country of vineyards. The grain might be destroyed, but it would grow again the next year, but an army cuts and burns trees and vineyards, and Spartacus was a species of phylloxera that the country people dreaded.

Wine was most important in the political relations between Rome and its provinces. Rome taught them war, building, language, and to drink wine. Gaul prohibited its importation. As China fears opium and France absinthe, so the ancient colonies feared the influence of wine. But this feeling disappeared when they were annexed and began to be assimilated. And as the colonies increased, the prosperity of the mother country did likewise, and largely through the vine, whose products found in every new province an additional field. Love of wine followed the army, and the more Germany, Dalmatia, or Pannonia drank the more filled were the coffers at home.

Dr. Ferrero spoke quite at length on the brightening influence of wine on literature, noting by the way that the writings of the classics had quite another office in view than that for which we value them. The authors wrote with a purpose, to oppose or to commend certain sentiments, and they were probably admired more for their principles than for the beauty of their poems. The dithyrambics of Horace about certain vintages were a source of advertising power that we do not appreciate at our distance from the events of his day.

Toward the close of his paper Dr. Ferrero drew a parallel between France and Rome. Much as economists may use for a measure of the commercial activity of a country the amount of sulphuric acid consumed by it, so this speaker takes the production of wine to accompany the highest culture. In France viniculture is an old heredity and an ultimate effect of the victories of the Romans. France today is at the head of the wine-growing countries, and Paris is the center for the highest types of culture. There is to be considered always the imitative nature of mankind. Following the Franco-German War there came a wave of admiration for the conquerors, and armies even of considerable countries imitated such minor items as the uniform of the German soldiers. Success breeds success and admiration. The victories of France have mirrored themselves in her wines. Had she been down-trodden and defeated champagne might have been but the tipple of country louts instead of the inspiration of the whole modern world. "France is modern Italy and Paris is the newer Rome, and wine has contributed to the elevation of the former no less than to the ancient grandeur of the latter."—Reprinted from the "American Wine Press."

We've talked so much about good goods and practiced what we preached so long that we've come to be recognized as the stores where foods may be obtained which are better and more agreeable than those found elsewhere.

The pure food law was a great step in doing good for many. It took a deal of investigation and research of many great minds to develop this law, which was one step in the right direction. The more pure food laws are created, the better we like it. We have been talking and preaching pure, unadulterated, wholesome food for years; it was the burden of our store; that's the flag we follow to victory.

SALADS AS AN AID TO BEAUTY

A cold, crisp, delicious salad—what can be more tempting? To be appetizing, a salad must be cold and its materials fresh. The wilted, luke-warm mixtures sometimes palmed off as salads are far from our thoughts when we quote Sidney Smith:

"O green and glorious, O herbaceous treat,
'Twould tempt the dying Anchorite to eat!"

We wonder how many mortals know that our beauty depends, more or less, on the kind, quality and quantity of food taken. To prove this belongs more to the physician than to the retailer of table delicacies, yet it must be apparent to every thoughtful and intelligent person.

You will admit some foods are more appetizing, contain more nutriment, are more readily digested than others; but few seem to realize the gratifying effect different salads have upon the system. At certain seasons of the year the liver is torpid and the blood sluggish, showing that the system needs a thorough cleansing. Take a change of diet and leave medicine alone, or nearly so. Salads should be indulged in for their stimulating, refreshing and beauty-giving properties, and it is well to remember, fair reader, that the French moralist said: "The first duty of women is to be pretty."

One of the most healthful salads is water cress, termed by a celebrated gourmand, the "queen of salads." It surely is easy to make—a few drops of Sierra Madre Olive Oil, a half cup of lemon juice sprinkled over—and a kindly medicine for thin persons.

Spinach is excellent, dressed with a plain French dressing. Tomato salad is very tempting and may be made by using slices of iced tomatoes in connection with any salad material you may happen to have on hand. Lemon is far more refreshing and healthful than vinegar in preparing cold slaw, tomato and many other cold dishes. Tomatoes are a great help to a yellow skin, in fact I know of nothing better as an aperient for the liver, and there is a story whispered around that quantities of tomatoes, taken often, will, besides helping the complexion, add greatly to the beauty of your eyes.

The day of the heavy, thick Italian oil has passed. It possessed strength, but lacked that extreme delicacy of flavor which characterizes the famous "Sierra Madre" oil, an oil which leaves a lingering pleasure with the palate. It is particularly adapted to those suffering from liver complaint and is so delicate that patients drink it by order of their physicians.

There is policy in being honest, you know. Some merchants know; other merchants do not. Honest goods find a ready sale.

We talk more about our goods than we do about our prices—we leave that to the public. For our prices we can say they are fair—first cost of goods plus expense and a margin of profit for ourselves. We sell large quantities of goods at a fair price. The volume of our business exceeds that of any retail grocer west of New York.

Groceries should be an important question, and you should solve it immediately. Health depends upon good food, and without health there can be no happiness.

Our reputation is worth more to us than our stock in trade or real estate. We can lose our property, we can lose our money and be burned out, almost anything can happen to us, but our reputation for honesty still remains. That's why we're so proud of our record.

We think our reputation deserves consideration at your hands.

"Dessaux" Vinegar originally comes from France. There is not another vinegar on the market that can be compared with this. For fine salad making it is superb.

Olives Farcies, full flavored olives, pitted and stuffed with anchovies and capers; especially piquant and appetizing—appeal to jaded appetites.

Anchovies in Oil.—If you are looking for something to add a touch of luxury to the dinner, don't overlook Anchovies in Oil; nothing nicer as an appetizer, taken on a piece of toast.

Pate de Foie Gras.—If you are anxious to please at card parties or for cold luncheons, we recommend Pate de Foie Gras used as a sandwich paste. Pate de Foie Gras is delicious and your true Frenchman has made of it a classic.

Sierra Madre Olive Oil is of the highest type and may be easily distinguished from other olive oils by its lightness and extreme delicacy of flavor. Sierra Madre Olive Oil has been imitated as far as the label goes, but the quality of the oil is beyond comparison.

Carmel Soap is made of pure olive oil in the oldest olive growing country in the world. It is the enterprise of the Mission Society in Palestine. It is free from adulteration and so sweet that few things are more agreeable for a tooth wash.

Wieland's Beer is mild, delicious, exhilarating and chemically pure. The process by which Wieland's Beer is made embodies every sanitary principle known to the science of health. Every ingredient passes a rigid test before it becomes a constituent of the manufactured product.

This beer is made in San Francisco by the largest and most modern plant on the Pacific Coast. In Wieland's Beer you will find an excellent home product, the quality of which does not suffer in comparison with any of the Coast beers.

Our stock consists of the luxuries and delicacies of every known civilized nation. Our stock in trade is our good will.

For 58 years the right kind of goods at right prices, fair, square methods. When an article doesn't please, remember we want it back, and we want to give you your money in its place, or something else—your option.

We're here to please you. When we cannot please you any longer, there is no reason for us to be here. We've served faithfully 58 years and our only desire is to serve 100 more, building a business for generations to come. Such a business must be founded on a firm basis and no advantage taken of the public.

Our Standard of Purity was fixed long before the passage of the Pure Food Law; consequently there has been no change in the quality of our products—Always the Best.

It's Service that Counts. That's why we have more business than any five grocers put together. You get the right goods and right away.

That merchant who puts up all his merchandise under other men's labels never can make a hit. He gets hit.

CIGARS

Our Cigar Department incurs no extra expense, which places us in a position to undersell all exclusive cigar dealers in this city.

Our policy is to give higher grade cigars for less money than offered elsewhere. We invite a comparison of quality and price, which will be the most convincing argument in favor of making your purchases here.

RECIPE FOR CURRY

First ingredient, cocoanut milk, made as follows:

Get from a candy store, or prepare yourself, a cocoanut which is freshly shredded and which must be used the same day it is shredded.

Place the shredded cocoanut in a deep dish and pour enough boiling water on it to cover it, and let the cocoanut soak for one hour and then strain the water and cocoanut through a cheese cloth and reject the dry cocoanut remaining in the cheese cloth and preserve the liquid, which is called above cocoanut milk.

The meat from which the curry is to be made must be raw and not previously cooked.

Curry can be made from chicken, mutton, oysters, frog legs and crabs.

Use deep saucepan.

Put in saucepan two tablespoonfuls of butter and two tablespoonfuls of thinly sliced green onions (chives), and the meat (a piece at a time first having dipped in the curry powder), for which purpose use two tablespoonfuls of curry powder.

Salt to taste.

Fry the butter, onions and meat, keep stirring until the onions are a golden brown, but on no account burn the onions or the curry is ruined.

Now pour one-half of the cocoanut milk into the saucepan and boil rapidly for a couple of minutes.

Add balance of the cocoanut milk a little at a time and stew gently until thoroughly cooked.

Rice to be cooked separately and served separately. Rice to be cooked dry in the Southern style or Chinese style.

Place rice on the plate and put the curry on the rice in serving.

The curry powder used must be the "Bombay Curry Powder," which may be obtained at Goldberg, Bowen & Co.'s. Any other curry powder does not possess the excellence of the "Bombay Curry Powder."

The meat used in the curry must be cut "stew size."

Condiments on the side: Sliced cucumber; grated or shredded fresh cocoanut; chille with mint; mango chutney from Goldberg, Bowen & Co.; sliced hard-boiled eggs.

If curry is served with fresh green peppers sliced, it adds a relish to it. Sprinkle peppers over curry just before serving.

This recipe makes enough curry for from four to six people.

Genuine goods cost money. There are expenses and dealer's profit.

Good goods cannot be sold cheap; at a fair price, yes.

Fools sometimes scheme, but they do not last. Some wise man said that "honesty is the best policy." It is a wise dealer that has a long memory.

No pretensions to cheapness here—good goods, plus expenses and a small profit. Why small? Because we've the confidence of large numbers of people. It is better to make a small profit on a large business than to make a large profit on a small business. It's a growing policy.

Our business consists of many departments. At the head of each department a man of experience is charged with its affairs. It requires expert knowledge to conduct a tea, wine, liquor, cigar and house furnishing department, doing the volume of business each of ours does. We have the men and the goods and the prices, too.

Success has a meaning—it shows we have the confidence of the public and we have stood the test of time, which is the crucible that those who cater to the public opinion have to pass through. We have passed all right. Fifty years and some.

COURAGE

There is really nothing worth while in a man, in any of us, except the mind, the will,—courage.

A man is what his spirit and determination are. The body is nothing but a machine to carry out the orders of that mysterious, impalpable force that lies in a man's skull and that controls his destiny.

Nothing hurts us except that which weakens our minds by weakening our courage. We can survive everything except the breaking of the mainspring in the heart and mind, and that mainspring is human courage. Friends may be lost; we can make others if we deserve them. Money may be lost; we can earn more through industry. The world may take from you the honors that it gives. You may be misunderstood, ridiculed, despised. But while you keep your courage and say "No" to the imp of discouragement at your ear, you have not lost your fight. Truly the old German poem says,

"Courage lost, everything lost,
Better you were never born."

Look at a man's eye, if you want to know what his chances are. If it wavers, if you read discouragement there, pity him and help him before it is too late. Courage to the mind is like blood to the body or air to the lungs;—there is no life possible without it.

DRINK MATTONI

¶ A water that mixes to perfection with the most exclusive wines and liquors.

¶ A natural effervescent water.

¶ Avoid artifically charged waters.

¶ Nature ought to be good enough for anybody.

¶ Waters charged with artificial gas are harmful and injurious.

¶ Mattoni comes to you just as it bubbles out of Mother Earth.

¶ A table water and recommended by the best of European doctors.

¶ Drink plenty of water and ask for the best—MATTONI!

¶ Spring at Giesshubl, near Carlsbad, Bohemia.

¶ Nature has made it to hold the right proportion of carbonic gas, and it is pure and natural, and far superior to waters artifically charged.

¶ We think it the best sparkling table water in the world and recommend it to all our patrons.

Good biscuits—and others

People nowadays are cautious about what they buy for the table.

A modern tendency to cheapen methods of manufacture at the expense of quality has made this caution necessary.

The makers of "DUNN" biscuits are old-fashioned enough to believe that the majority of persons still look for quality, rather than price, in the things they eat.

"DUNN" biscuits are made on that principle; quality first—then price—satisfaction always.

"DUNN" biscuits are good biscuits

COFFEE DEPARTMENT

There is no commodity we sell that enters more into every-day use or is more generally consumed each morning than COFFEE. There are many varieties, but none can surpass a blend of JAVA and MOCHA.

There are many so-called Java and Mocha coffees, but we are thinking of one in particular—EXCELSIOR, which is a blend of the "Highest Grade" of Java and Mocha coffees obtainable, old brown Private Estate Java and genuine Arabian Mocha.

We receive this coffee in the original mats and roast it ourselves in our modern and thoroughly up-to-date coffee roasting plant, where the latest machinery and most perfect devices have been installed. A special contrivance for eliminating the chaff during the process of grinding has been successful in giving each coffee we sell individuality.

Our prices range from 25 to 40 cents per pound.

We can please almost anybody, no matter how fastidious.

The essential points for making good coffee are:

First—It must be fresh roasted.

Second—Made fresh—properly—and served hot. Fresh cream always preferable to evaporated; the latter will change the character, no matter how good the coffee.

BUY GOLDBERG, BOWEN & CO.'S HIGH-GRADE BLENDS AND YOU'LL BE SATISFIED.

Marshall Field said: "Give a man his MONEY'S WORTH and you can always have ALL of his business." Bravo, Marshall Field!

We don't ask you to take our say-so that are extra-fresh and extra-good. We guarantee them. If you are not satisfied, your money will be returned without quibbling. You see, we know that our groceries are the highest quality, and we deliver them to you, knowing that they will satisfy you in every way—and we're willing to pay the freight both ways if they don't prove to you they are better than other groceries.

You often hear people say:
"I drink very little water."

Look at them—do they impress you as robust, strong, healthy persons with good, rich red blood?

Our bodies require lots of water—good pure water. Besides that we need still more to cleanse the system.

In the first place it must be Pure. We surely would spoil all the benefit if we drank water swarming with germs.

In the second place it must be Good. Give that man who says he drinks very little water a glass of Mattoni.

One glass—he's converted. Next week he will be telling everybody to drink lots of water.

SUGAR

Bar Sugar

Hawley's Excelsior Bar Sugar is used for fancy frosting, bakers' use, and is especially adapted for general bar use. It is manufactured by an improved process and will dissolve instantly in all liquids. It is put up in 33-lb. cans and for shipment out of town is enclosed in a wooden box This mode of packing prevents it from caking.

We cannot quote prices in these columns, as the market is constantly changing.

SUGAR—Continued

Granulated Sugar

We recommend buying granulated sugar in 50 and 100-lb. sacks. It contains the same quality of sugar that is found in the barrels and boxes.

This method of buying sugar will be found the most economical, as owing to the refinery list, we are obliged to charge for the different packages as follows:

	price per cwt. over sack
100-lb. sack ....list price	....
50-lb. sack	$0 10

GOLDBERG, BOWEN & CO.

Between Hazelnut and other butters there is a difference so noticeable, a smoothness and delicacy of flavor so emphasized that no butter has yet been made equal to Hazelnut. The golden tint, the "stand-up" qualities, the incomparable flavor —one taste will convince you that is fully worth its price. We pay more for Hazelnut Butter—a premium on goodness—and that's good for you. Price doesn't count so much as quality. No pains spared to make it the richest, purest, most deliciously flavored of all butters.

Net Weight of Butter 2 lbs.

Packed in odor-proof, paraffine-lined cartons at the dairy.

Goldberg, Bowen & Co.

O. K. Bourbon Blend

Worth all we ask for it and more, too

GOLDBERG, BOWEN & CO.

STARCH?

The best is none too good. . .

That is the reason we offer our friends "MURDOCH'S" high grade Corn Starch, and Velvet Gloss Starch, (in packages only, never in bulk).

In our opinion there is nothing quite so good.

Yours at command.

A truly exhilarating COFFEE

Is Hawaiian Beauty Blend. U. S. Army officers are authority for the statement that good coffee has food value in addition to being stimulating. They claim it lessens waste and relieves the stomach and intestines of extra work.

Hawaiian Beauty is just such a coffee, and within the range of any pocket book—

30 cents a pound

Surely, at such a reasonable figure, you will at least try this delicious blend. It will not only please the palate, but help assure perfect digestion.

Goldberg, Bowen and Company, Inc.

Bee Brand Ceylon Teas

Imported direct from Ceylon in lead foil, air-tight packages. Packed by modern machinery. Famous for their fine flavor, excellence and purity. Sales increase yearly. They give universal satisfaction.

Hams for export are cured and packed with unusual care, and curers use every precaution to guard against spoiling, but they cannot guarantee hams to keep in all climates, especially where it is very warm. We, as shippers, cannot therefore entertain claims for hams spoiled.

Ripe Olives are rich, mellow and delicious Try them

'Tis said that one person in three can manage a liking for green olives—the common pickled kind. Even so, they are only nibbled, as a condiment, a relish. But everybody likes ripe olives who tries them. They are a food, not a condiment, a wholesome, appetizing fruit food. You can't eat too many of them for your good.

The reason of this is that there is just about as much difference between green and ripe olives as between green and ripe apples. Ripe olives are a dark purple in color, something like plums. They are delicious in taste, mellow and rich with olive oil, which is the most perfect food in the world.

In this State, where olives are grown, ripe olives receive the preference over the green fruit. Until lately they couldn't be packed for shipment. Now, by a new vacuum process of canning, they are put up to keep indefinitely and we are able to ship this delicious fruit to our Eastern friends.

Let us urge you to try ripe olives. Try them once and we think you'll want to keep them on your table all the time.

Ripe olives sell at 20c, 25c, 30c, 35c, 40c, 50c and 60c can

VAN CAMP'S BOSTON BAKED PORK AND BEANS

Copyrighted, 1908, by Goldberg, Bowen & Co., S. F.

DAIRY PRODUCE

BUTTER, EGGS AND CHEESE

This department is a special feature of our business and is in charge of one of our managers, who has had the immediate supervision of it for years.

He knows that GOLDBERG, BOWEN & CO. want not only GOOD butter and eggs, but that they demand the BEST, as they cannot maintain their reputation as MASTER GROCERS by anything less than the very finest.

We cannot quote prices here, as the market is constantly changing.

All butter is sold in strictly full weight squares of two pounds each.

"M" BUTTER

This butter is the finest that is made in California. It is churned from the cream of Jersey cows only and then it is worked and iced until it is as perfect as is possible to make it.

For those who like a firm, clear, delicately flavored butter, the "M" butter will meet their requirements in every way.

We ask but a slight advance over the price of the ordinary table butter, but the difference in quality is so pronounced as to make it well worth the few extra cents.

HAZELNUT

Cream of the Dairies

Under this label, we send out a fine grade of table butter, which should satisfy the demands of the most fastidious housekeeper. It is made especially for us in one of the cleanest and most up-to-date creameries in the State, and it MUST be good butter or we wouldn't let it get past our front door.

FIRKIN

During the winter months of the year we carry in stock the best grade of cold storage butter that is made. It makes a fair table butter and is especially adapted for cooking uses, when the finest creamery butter is selling at the maximum figures.

Some hints in the preparation of oysters

Do you know what makes the French Chef's famous fried oysters so delicious? He fries them in olive oil. It's by far the best way. Makes them rich and toothsome and easily digested, but not greasy. If you would have the most appetizing fried oysters that an epicure could wish, fry them in Sierra Madre Olive Oil. It is the purest and most wholesome olive oil in the world. 25c, 50c and 85c the bottle.

Bread crumbs for frying oysters are preferred to cracker dust by the best chefs.

The catsup that goes with your oysters should be the best obtainable.

In making the oyster stew we suggest that you add a touch of sherry. It gives that piquancy which you will find in oysters thus served in the best cafes. Our own bottling of sherry, guaranteed pure. 50c bottle up.

Pin-Money Pickles

"Thereby hangs a tale"
—as Bill says.

Office of
CARROLL WHITAKER
ATTORNEY

SAUGERTIES, N. Y., July 31, 1896.

DEAR MADAM: In my innocence I purchased in New York (100 miles from here) a jar of your "PIN-MONEY PICKLES." It brought me great trouble, and one of three things must occur: 1, you must stop making them; or, 2, I must get them at less expense; or, 3, I'm a ruined man. Since my first venture I've had many "jars." My family from early morn cry "Pickles"; neighbors ring the door-bell and shout, "Pickles"; relatives visit me in expectation of "Pickles." Your pickles are my Nemesis. Please, Dear Madam, quote them by the Keg, Barrel, Hogshead, Ton or Shipload, and "preserve" me.

Yours very truly,
CARROLL WHITAKER.

ESTABLISHED 1818

Kirsebaer Liqueur

Purveyor by Appointment to H. M. the King of England, the Royal Danish and Imperial Russian Courts.

"There is something in the success of this particular Liqueur which pleases one. To have distanced the whole world in the production of so homely and familiar a cordial—the Cherry Cordial is made the whole world over, though nowhere so well as in Copenhagen—is a sort of universal triumph; and conspicuous success of this kind will be found to be rare and invariably well deserved."—Extract from the Wine and Spirits Trades Combined Circulars.

FLOUR

Excelsior and Our Choice flours are our own private brands. They are made specially for us, and the makers are instructed to spare no pains regarding quality. They are recommended by us as a superior to advertised brands and are made especially for users of choice flour. Only on account of not being extravagantly advertised, we are able to sell them at the same prices as the advertised brands.

Tea kills typhoid germs

A news dispatch from Washington says:

> Tea is now elevated from the position of a social beverage to the dignity of a germ destroyer. Dr. McNaught, the medical investigator, has found that typhoid bacilli placed in cold or lukewarm tea are greatly diminished at the end of four hours and completely disappear in a day. The value of this finding is obvious to military surgeons. In filling soldiers' canteens danger from typhoid infection would, after a few hours, be almost nil.

Understand that we offer this merely as a scientific statement. We are not medical specialists. We don't know whether tea will or will not kill typhoid germs. If true, it is important not only for army use but for every person who wants to escape the danger of typhoid in drinking beverages.

When it comes to selecting tea, however, we have something to say. We are tea specialists. It is with the authority of knowledge that we offer Bee Brand Ceylon Tea as the best Ceylon tea in San Francisco. Best when drunk warm; best for icing. When iced, it retains its flavor, body and zest and has none of that acrid, herby tang so common in some classes of tea when cooled. There are many and many 75c and $1.00 teas sold today that are not as good as Bee Brand Ceylon at

SLOE GIN

From its birth, the Pedlar Brand Sloe Gin has been claimed by us to be the original Liqueur Sloe Gin, placed upon the market as a commercial commodity, and its exceptionally fine quality and purity has gained for it a world-wide reputation. We guarantee that no essences of any kind whatever are used in its manufacture. The demand has grown by leaps and bounds, and there is scarcely anyone who is not acquainted with the Pedlar Brand. It is sold in practically every country, and all who taste it appreciate its cleanness on the palate and wonderfully pleasing and fascinating flavor.

Merely because you have used such-and-such a coffee for years, it does not necessarily follow that it is as good as, or better than our coffees.

Our Coffees would never have attained the sale they have if they were not superior to other coffees.

Try any of our brands! That is the best way to determine how good they all are.

Coffees

Pure, Delicious, Fresh

If Sierra Madre Olive Oil sold for ten dollars, instead of for 85 cents, a bottle, it would be no better, no purer than it is.

There are no "adulterants" in Sierra Madre Olive Oil; no harmful ingredients of any kind.

It is pure Olive Oil—nothing else.

Sierra Madre

A pure, delicious Olive Oil.

Pure air; pure thoughts; pure water; pure groceries.

They are of almost equal importance.

We leave it to you where or how to get pure air; pure thoughts or pure water.

But we can tell you where to get pure groceries. Pure Groceries from

Vintage Wines

In England and Europe wines are listed and priced according to vintage. In America, in most cases, there is a uniform price for "a bottle of wine." We offer a list, to choose from, of vintage wines which were purchased by our buyer on the London market at nominal prices. In most cases, upon investigation, you will find that the same wines are quoted on the New York market at the present time at much higher prices than those we herewith quote, but as we have only a limited amount on hand, we are anxious to dispose of the lot and therefore quote them at attractive prices below their market value.

"RHINE WINES have great fragrance and vinosity, and are pre-eminently the wines most suitable for intellectual enjoyment, as they are particularly exhilarating and increase the appetite. Being of light alcoholic strength, but rich in volatile ethers, they are exceedingly efficacious, and do not (like Clarets) so quickly spoil after opening."

"BURGUNDY is pre-eminently a full-bodied wine, but it is aromatic, not alcoholic. It sends a glow of warmth, gives a feeling of geniality, is most grateful to the whole organism, and more potent than Claret. One-eighth of a bottle is quite sufficient to produce this effect."

SHERRY—FOR WIT

"Valor comes of sherries," says Sir John Falstaff, claiming for his favorite beverage that it clears the brain of its natural dullness and inspires the tongue with excellent wit. Ben Jonson eulogizes the wine with warmth equal to that of Shakespeare. Herrick apostrophizes it as "the drink of gods and angels," and predicts that, when he can no longer indulge in it, his verse will lose its living fire and smell of the lamp.

Curacao Triple Sec

This is a Tonic, and at the same time aids digestion.
It is made from the finest quality bitter orange peels.

Marasquin

Is made from small Cherries from Dalmatia and only genuine Marasquin is made from these cherries. Grown chiefly in the south of France. It has a pleasing perfume and is agreeable to the taste.

This Liqueur is quite a Ladies' Drink.

¶ You may sing of your old oaken buckets—your mountain springs—your artesian wells—but they're all of doubtful purity—open to contamination and none of them taste as good as

MATTONI

The Best Water in the World

No two springs—no two lakes—no two rivers—no two wells taste alike—therefore there must be foreign matter in the water to affect the taste.

Just pure water—nothing else—taste it.

You never again will risk city water.

You never again will bother with boiled water.

You just drink Mattoni because you like it so.

A good rule is to drink six glasses of Mattoni a day.

DOMESTIC BEER

All of the city beer bottlers charge a deposit on their crown-top bottles, as follows: one-half bottles 35 cents a dozen, bottles 45 cents a dozen, as a security for their return, and we are under the necessity of making a similar charge.

THE PRICES BELOW INCLUDE THE DEPOSIT ABOVE MENTIONED. We will refund this money at any time upon return of bottles.

"Money-back"

We all go to a reputable firm to buy, only for the reason that if the goods we buy of them do not make good we have a come-back. The funny part of it is we rarely ever need to resort to the come-back privilege extended by them for our protection. Else they would not be entertained by us as reputable. The store that anticipates—with a fine sense of quality—the every want of every customer, and always has it—is IT.

Poland Spring

MAINE

The Most Elaborate Bottling Works in the World

THE NEW SPRING HOUSE AND BOTTLERY AT POLAND SPRING, MAINE

BUILT on the lines of Spanish Mission architecture—so familiar and popular with Californians—of hydraulic pressed, gray, mottled fire brick, topped with roof of dull green mission tile; the exterior of these buildings is most inviting. The interiors, however, are wonderfully beautiful and amazingly equipped. The entire interior walls, ceiling and floors are of the famous Carrara glass an inch in thickness. The ornamentation is of Pavanezzo marble and mosaic. The mechanical devices are all of silver or heavily plated metal. Belt conveyers are used everywhere to prevent handling. All the air supplied is forced under pressure through great cotton filters in the tower, entering the room at top and being exhausted near the floors. Every operative takes a shower bath and dons a special hygienic uniform before entering this department.

This great expense has been undertaken that every bottle of Poland Spring water may reach the purchaser in any part of the world in the same marvelously pure state it possesses at its source.
